

Crack Army Flier, Injured In Crash, Dies From Hurts

Death of Lieut. Cyrus K. Bettis Attributed to Terrific Strain in Making Way from Scene of Accident; Crawled for Several Hours

FELL IN MOUNTAIN NEAR BELLEFONTE, PA.

Aviator One of Most Popular and Best Pilots in Army Services Came into Prominence in Victory Over Naval Entry in Pulitzer Race

WASHINGTON Sept. 1—Lieut. Cyrus K. Bettis, crack army aviator, who crashed into a fog-obscured mountain near Bellefonte, Pa., last week, died at Walter Reed Hospital at 9:05 o'clock this morning.

Lieutenant Bettis had been thought recovering from the injuries he received in his crash until last night when his condition suddenly took a turn for the worse. In addition to internal injuries, he suffered a broken leg and his jaws were fractured.

Pending the arrival of the dead flier's mother from Port Huron, Mich., no funeral arrangements will be made. He is reported enroute here, having been summoned by army authorities last night.

The death of the aviator was in no small part attributed to the terrific strain he underwent in making his way from the scene of the crash to the hospital where he was taken. He was found by a patrolman on a mountain side where he had been flying. He crawled for several hours before he was discovered.

He was one of the most popular and best pilots in the army services. He came into prominence in his victory over the naval entry in the Pulitzer race.

San Francisco, Sept. 1—United States Senator Samuel M. Shortridge, who based his campaign for re-election largely upon his advocacy of the Coolidge administration, has won the republican nomination by a large majority over Judge Robert Clarke, of Los Angeles, with campaign as a son of the World Court.

Congressman Walter H. Hays, of New York, was defeated in his campaign for re-election.

In the case of the United States primary campaign in the state of California, the Coolidge administration has won the republican nomination by a large majority over Judge Robert Clarke, of Los Angeles, with campaign as a son of the World Court.

Young Is Victor

G. G. Young, present lieutenant governor and son of the Richardson administration, is the apparent victor in the race with Rex B. Goodell, a former state legislator.

Although at an early hour today Richardson's headquarters maintained that returns would pull the governor through for re-election, the Coolidge campaign is a statement that the people of the state for the position of governor.

Richardson's headquarters claim that the Coolidge vote which was expected to be the majority, was actually a small minority.

Although the state republican nomination was regarded as an assured thing, the Coolidge campaign is a statement that the people of the state for the position of governor.

U. S. RESERVATIONS ON WORLD COURT FOUGHT

General Sept. 1—Spain's request for a permanent seat in the League of Nations will not be granted for the time being at least. The year convention committee of the League of Nations, which met in Geneva, decided that the League was not prepared to grant Spain's request.

General Sept. 1—The battle against acceptance of the proposed reservation to the United States entry into the World Court opened today soon after the conference of jurists representing the powers signatory to the World Court met here to consider the reservation.

The first two reservations proposed by the United States were accepted by the conference with little or no debate. When the third reservation was brought up, Sir George Foster, Canadian delegate, opened an attack on the reservation and was supported by several other delegates.

Sir George Foster declared that the third reservation would give the United States the power of veto upon all world court amendments which had been accepted by all other court members, and that, he said, was entirely inadmissible.

A formula granting Germany the only new permanent seat in the League of Nations was adopted by the reorganizational committee of the council today.

The formula provided nine temporary seats three of which are held by permanent. The Spanish delegate refused to accept the formula, and in declaration were that Spain would withdraw from the League. Poland also manifested dissatisfaction.

Records Show 2,000 Dogs in County and City are Without Owners' License Tags

THREE thousand and nine hundred dogs have been issued in Marion County this year the register in the office of the county clerk shows.

According to estimates there are at least 600 more canines that are not licensed.

Taking all dogs, licenses of a few dogs as a basis William T. Lewis, publisher of a magazine and looks about dogs, guesses that 20 per cent of the city dogs need licenses, and that dogs are four times as numerous in proportion to humans in the county as in the city.

Last year in Marion County more than 3,000 licenses for dogs were issued from the county auditor's office.

Thus over the number is 700 less and a saving to all statistics the dog population of this county is on a rapid increase.

It is believed that each year more and more dog owners are neglecting the license fee.

Fourteen dog kennels are located in Marion County according to the kennel register. One of these is in the city. One of the largest kennels of the county is located in Tulsa.

According to experts in the Department of Agriculture the United States is undergoing a boom in dogs. The canine population of the United States is placed at about 6,000,000.

RULE AGAINST PEDDLERS WILL BE CONTINUED

Mayor Earl Hazen's Policy To Be Followed in Ordinance Effective Sept. 9

Readers will continue after the ordinance governing this type of business goes into effect Sept. 9, it was said today.

The ordinance was adopted by City Council early in August. It repeals all of the city legislation relating to peddlers.

Under the functioning of the present ordinance, no house-to-house canvasser or street vendors are permitted to operate in the city unless they are absolutely unquestionable in their ability and are able to show that they are offering high class merchandise at reasonable prices. The mayor says that his program at all times is to protect not only the buying public but to eliminate all peddling that would create unfair competition for local merchants.

Refuses Licenses

Carrying out this policy, the city's chief executive has refused peddlers' licenses to many applicants since he took charge of municipal affairs January 1. A few days ago two more salesmen, apparently men of alien birth, were denied permits to canvass the city solely because the mayor believed that their proposition was not fair to local business houses and that their credentials were not up to requirements.

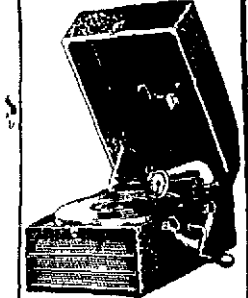

Under this rigid protective program there has been a large decrease in the number of itinerant salesmen operating here so that this class of merchandise is no longer a burden to the city. The mayor is confident that the relief of peddlers' activities will be a benefit to the city and that the public is greatly benefited by the opportunity to buy the supplies direct from the producer.

One Exception

The mayor makes an exception of the sale of farm and garden products because he believes that the public is greatly benefited by the opportunity to buy the supplies direct from the producer.

DIRECT STATE TAX LEVY MAY BECOME ISSUE

Ohio Association of Real Estate Boards Opposed to New Move

A proposed direct levy of taxes by the state for highway improvement and upkeep is likely to be an issue in the campaign preceding the November election as a result of action against the plan taken by the Ohio Association of Real Estate Boards.

A resolution placing this organization on record as being firmly opposed to any increase in the state's property tax was adopted at a recent meeting of the executive committee of the real estate dealers' association held in Columbus. J. W. Jacob of Marion President of the state organization was in charge of the meeting.

Movement in support of the proposed levy is backed by the Ohio Automobile Association and the Ohio Good Roads Association. The proposed levy is opposed by the real estate organization on the grounds that all state expenses should be paid from indirect taxes, such as excise and corporate income and the gasoline tax. Also, with the state's income tax, which is the highest in the state, the levy would be a burden on the people.

Members of the republicans in the state government have announced that they will oppose any move to increase the state's direct taxes.

A similar stand the question is likely to be a feature prominently in the campaign. The move it will be one of the tax issues according to present indications.

The present state levy includes a small assessment for the support of schools, all of the revenue from which is used for the districts where the payments are made and a levy to pay the principal and interest of the state bonds.

Also, a small additional direct levy for highway purposes will have an average of 10 cents per acre of land.

Mr. Baker and Debt Cancellation.
It is a significant fact that former Secretary of War Newton D. Baker's statement, in which the former war secretary recommends practically the cancellation of all war debts owed to the United States by the governments and which we were associated in the World War, has been prominently featured in a magazine published by the Union Trust company of Mr. Baker's home city of Cleveland.
There can be little question but what Mr. Baker voices the view of the great financial institution which gave his statement its initial publication. It would be the exceptional indulgence of the kind were such not its position. The charge has frequently been made that the financial power of the bank is the cause of the cancellation of war debts due our government, but the reason that the greater the relief given the debtors of the government, the better would be the position of the same debtors to meet such obligations as they may owe our money lenders and the greater would be the ability of the cities, corporations and other organizations of such debtor nations to carry and liquidate the obligations which they may owe to the high financial institutions of the United States. In this as it may, it is safe to say that for some reason our great trust and banking interests seem to be largely champions of debt cancellation.

All the arguments offered for the cancellation of war debts due this country which have come to our notice are in one on the proposition that we should give all and take nothing to regain European good will and place the countries of Europe once more upon their feet. We can not help being skeptical regarding the value of friendship and good will which hang to be thus purchased. We seriously question, too, whether the cancellation of the war debts owed us of all war debts contracted by governments would put Europe again upon her feet or bring about the era of peace and good will which the champions of debt cancellation claim would come as a natural sequence. It is worth noting that in all this propaganda in behalf of debt cancellation there has not been one word uttered by the propagandists favoring the restoration of the colonies wrested from the Central powers to their former owners. As we have pointed out in previous writings on the subject, all talk of peace and good will throughout Europe as a result of debt cancellation without restoration to the Central powers of their colonies and the European colonies taken from them, is but a mere slogan to the restoration to Russia of the territory which she has lost, is largely phib.

To our way of thinking cancellation of the debts Europe owes us would do far more harm than good. We have demonstrated our appreciation of the European situation by scaling down the debts due us till they are but about a third of the amount we loaned. Our debtors should meet our generous proposition. It would force them to retain at least a measure of their self-respect. It would lessen the enormous sums they have to pay in maintaining armies and armaments. It would serve to penalize the warlike spirit. To cancel the war debts Europe owes us would mean advancing the time of another European war. If the countries of Europe are freed of the debts they contracted during the World War, war more natural than that they would incline to the view that they could again look to us for support and break into another, relying upon us to wash clean the slate again?

To cancel the war debts due us would make us the only financial loser of the allied and associated powers, for all the rest have been recompensed, in a measure at least, by the lands they acquired as a result of the war. When France got back Alsace and Lorraine, when all the colonies of the Central powers have been restored, when the Russian boundaries are again where it was before the war, then and then only should debt cancellation be considered, and then and then only will there be ground for hope of prolonged European peace and amity.

After all, there is absolutely nothing in a name, as the late Mr. Shakespeare intimated. The name of the man just as good as elected Governor of Texas is Moody.

"I read in a Paris cable," observed the restaurant philosopher at luncheon today, "that Georges Clemenceau is proud of his anti-debt-paying letter to President Coolidge and plans to mail another thunderbolt." The effects of time's ravages show in the best of us.

Tips are linked to an aggregate of sixty cents a day by the new schedule, approved by the president, put out for the use of government employees. It may be just as well that Mr. Coolidge takes most of his meals in the White House. We would hate to see him starve in death.

Primary Cost Is High.
A. W. Kott, clerk of the board of elections, recently announced that the cost of the last primary in the various voting sub-divisions of the county was $4,617. In other words, that each of the votes cast by the 1,571 voters out of the county's total voting strength of 22,569 cost $1.40.
It must not be imagined that this ballot cost was exceptionally large. As a matter of fact, it was exceptionally small. Clerk Kott states that in some years past the cost of a vote has been estimated at from three to five dollars.

But even at the exceptionally low figure of $1.40—low as the cost of primary votes go—can't such a cost for too high for minority representation? When so small a proportion of the voting strength of a county—in this case but twenty per cent—turns out that each vote costs $1.40, is there not something radically wrong with the system? Is not the cost far too great for the result achieved?

These figures, to our way of thinking, show one of the weaknesses of the primary system. Possibly it were better to say one of the objections to it—the matter of cost. The cost of registering, canvassing and tabulating the votes is but a part—a small part of the cost of the primary. There is also the cost of the money expended by the candidates and their friends and the cost of the time wasted by them, not only their own time, but also that of those upon whom they call. But by far the greatest loss is that sustained by the world of business. Campaigns are ever attended by bulls in the business world. Established business enterprises feel the effect, and projected business enterprises often are delayed until the campaign is over. This is particularly true in presidential years.

Politics at any and all times—at least, politics as we know politics in this country—is over expensive and the primary but serves to more than double

Loss of Nerve Force Affects Eyes.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

In the winter-time when the wind blows we stay in the house a lot. We read more during the long winter months than we do in the summer.

It would be hard now before we get to enjoying the pleasures of winter holidays. If we are going to do much reading, it is important to know the eyes in proper condition. How long has it been since you had your glasses changed?

You may say you never wear glasses. If you are approaching forty years of age or have passed that milestone, it will be a good thing to have your eyes looked over to see if glasses are needed. It is surprising for what a long period the use of glasses is deferred. Everybody who has anything to do with the fitting of glasses knows that it is an accident usually which sends the victim of eye strain for eye examination. There may be chronic headache, dizziness, nervousness, indigestion, and a lot of symptoms which are fairly referred to the eyes.

After testing the vision and getting the right glasses, all these symptoms may disappear.

Many a child has been counted stupid in school the last stupid at all. The need of glasses is responsible for an inability to study. When the right glasses have been adjusted the child surprises the teacher by his progress.

It is a good rule to have the glasses looked over at least once in two years. Try to recall when you had yours fitted. If it was two years or more ago it is time to have a re-examination.

Sometimes glasses fail to give relief because the test was made of the eye muscles to see if the movement of the eye is normal. There must be some work on the part of the eyes to have the most comfortable vision. Each eye must move in harmony with its fellow so that each eye will all the time be properly directed at the object looked at. We refer to this feature as the proper balancing of the eyes.

A. The United States Naval Observatory says that there are four foremost functions of the Naval Observatory. All are complicated and of such importance that no one can be said to be the most important. In the order of their establishment they are: (a) The continuous maintenance of observations of the heavenly bodies for improving the tables of the planets and their satellites, of the moon and of the stars, and for determining the fundamental constants used in preparing the American Ephemeris and Nautical Almanac. At the same time the department of astronomical observations furnishes the observations for determining the time.

The Way of the World.

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

Let your attention be called for a moment to Clarence Dale Badgley. This young man from Springfield, Ohio, has just come out triumphant in a contest with other students of architecture which enables him to have three years study in Rome. Badgley was born on a farm and his parents were so poor he had to earn every penny of his expenses in school and college. He waited on table, fired furnaces and clerked after school hours. Other young men, after the present day manner, with plenty of money loaded and "had a good time" while Badgley studied. These other young men, hearing of Badgley's victory, will say "How does it come that some fellows have all the luck?"

A certain professor of English tells how to write a poem. He says the poet should begin by writing the last line. He might add that many poets would do well to let it go at that.

The center of a twenty-two story building in Chicago, clear to the top, will be used as a garage. More than 500 cars will be housed. "This is a new thing in the architecture of the day," says the architect. "It is a new thing. We shall have to do more drastic things. The day will come when we have two-story streets from which we can enter the upper floors of stores and office buildings from the upper street. Subways at crowded corners will be common. Thus we shall keep a jump ahead of the human saturation point in traffic."

Between 1920 and 1925 the farm population of Michigan decreased by more than 57,000. Such the same thing could be said for many states. Let's hope the farmers who remain will make so much money that some of the city dwellers will move back, cultivate more ground and make corn and beans cheap again.

You may not think it is important to make your children read. It may turn out to be the most important thing in the world. Good citizenship is dependent upon obedient. By training in obedience when they are young, your children learn right from wrong. And there is a difference between right and wrong despite what modern loose thinkers think, or think they think. Dr. Ingler, Wisconsin educator, is right when he tells the American legion:

"To make good citizenship effective there must be obedience from infancy to higher authority. The keen edge of right and wrong has been dulled. Young men of the legion, you are alike charged with the big task of saving this nation, not from foreign foes, but from foes within its borders. Yours is a war of education and reformation of our social forces. Yours is a battle of turning from foolish political sagacity to sound practices of our forefathers who designed us to be a republic."

Locke, the philosopher, used to say that a child will learn three times as fast when he is in tune as he will when he is dragged to his task. It is a wonderful gift to be able to lead people instead of having to drive them. Keep in tune with your children is perhaps one of the most difficult tasks in the world, but it is not impossible. And it pays big dividends to both you and the children.

VISCOUNT WILLINGDON.
Greenian Thomas, Viscount Willingdon of Ration, successor to Baron Bingham of Viny as governor general of Canada will arrive in Canada in September to take up his duties.

The new governor general is sixty years old, a member of one of the old county families of England and a Liberal in politics. He served in the house of commons, 1900-1910; was junior lord of the treasury, 1905-1912; governor of Bombay, 1913-1919; of Madras, 1919-1921.

The London-Paris Air Line.

[Columbus Dispatch.]
Since the regular carrying of passengers on aeroplanes between London and Paris was established, a few years ago, we are told that the number of miles flown on this route has been more than 4,500,000, and that there have been but four accidents involving the loss of human life. About 14,000 passengers used the service during the past year. "Unfortunately, New York fares are not available for comparison," says a New York paper, somewhat ironically.

London-Paris passenger traffic constitutes a special case, entirely different from that which confronts the possible promoters of air travel between any other two large cities. London and Paris are not far apart, each has a great reputation, and for heavy travel toward them, and their own residents are swollen by the enormous volume of American and other emigrants, that is constantly passing from one of the two to the other. Between them lies the English channel, which furnishes probably one of the most disagreeable of shipboard routes of travel.

The conditions are thus ideal for a successful passenger traffic by aeroplane. If New York and Chicago had two or three hours of rough sea travel between them, does any one doubt that a popular and profitable passenger traffic by air would have connected them long ago?

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. MINTYRE.

New York, Sept. 1.—Many wait the day after tomorrow. I have found a human collection on Fifth Avenue that is a smart restaurant. It is a rather a variety, a medley of manners and an ascertained crowd from a rather hollow world.

New Yorkers are out not so much to eat as to be noticed. Everything is staged. As the little veils of the theater are achieved, the latest fashions, however in ordinary, are unconsciously obeyed in tables where they may be seen. Headwaiters call it "dressing the room."

The haute de hotel with that slow motion of its kind grows the dining in. As the human collection in French. The champagne to a table with the pilotage waiter's hand held high and assistant's duty to pull the chairs is the grandest of human I know to be a importance to unimportant.

The most "sure feel the ballroom" of this grand affair and wish they had brought along more money. An expert waiter has a way of adding all the studied little gestures. He has a glass of ice water with an imaginary "K" to keep it away by a bus boy.

He charges the spotless floor for desert as though the desert might be contaminated. It has been said you never see a waiter's face, but how overpowering at times is his presence. I always look at a waiter's face, how can I want to discover one who wears glasses? So far I have failed.

Waiters often display a quick presence of mind. I might a lady in striking a match near by and a box of matches. The waiter in as in clapped a napkin over the flame and snuffed it out. Too, I notice that ice water glasses are now colored—blue, amber and green obviously to hide what the diners bring a glass.

Then there is the fun of eavesdropping. At the new "old" he—old enough to know better—was saying: "And won't we have fun in the morning? I'm going for diamonds!" Her conversation had been in bored monosyllables, but she had been perceptibly and in a little while said: "I have one dance Daddy and take me home." I think she wanted to discuss that diamond suggestion a little more earnestly.

By the most glittering and dazzling case signs, those of the heavily increasing number of Chinese restaurants on Broadway. In strict contrast are their dim-lit and shadowy interiors. There are only the soft blobs of light lights and the rest seems darkness.

A brisk fire seal clouds of yellowish smoke from a private home on Fifth Avenue in the lift. Finally three firemen were carried out unconscious. A well-dressed man, rushing in from a taxi, was seen to be rushing. The fireman was carried out on a ponderous stretcher and applied its contents in resuscitation. The din of cheers could be heard several blocks.

Wilton Lackaye was selected as the guest of honor at an amateur theatrical banquet. He spent two hours while dreary oratory was expounded. Finally the hostmaster said: "We will now hear the address of the guest of honor."

"The Lamb's Club!" said Lackaye—and sat down.

A new little shop house in Seventh avenue counts this sign on a side wall: "We do not serve snails, but we have several who will serve you." Incidentally the first snail ever served in New York were served to Dan Daley in old times.—Copyright, 1920.

Today's Worst Story.

BY WILL ROGERS.

The worst story I heard today was a Scotch story. England couldn't get along without telling its daily Scotch story. A Scot from Aberdeen was head over heels in love with a girl he had left behind. He could stand it no longer, so he decided to telegraph a proposal of marriage to her. In case she refused and with true Scotch caution, he did not press the reply, but kept calling at the telegraph office all day to see if she had answered. Night arrived and at last a message arrived and it feverishly opened it to find that she had accepted him. Overjoyed at his good fortune, he told the girl at the telegraph office all about it. "Yes," said the girl, "she kept you waiting here all day for an answer. I would think twice before I would marry a person that would do that."

"That's what you're wrong, Lassie," replied the Scotchman. "She been waiting for the reduced night rate—she's the lass for me." Copyright, 1920.

Extensive Improvements Under Way at Fairground In Preparation For Fair

Carpenters, Painters and Other Workers Busy Putting Grounds and Buildings in First Class Condition for Annual Event; Officials Predict Unusual Success

Carpenters, painters, and other workmen are busy on the Marion County fairgrounds this week.

Extensive improvements are being made on many of the buildings in preparation for one of the greatest fairs in the history of Marion County. Carpenters today were busy near the grandstand doing repair work.

All frame buildings have been decorated with a coat of white paint, and present an attractive appearance. The grandstand race track has also been newly painted.

The art display building, the finest on the grounds, is ready for the placing of exhibits and is expected to receive a great many before the opening of the fair.

Other display structures have been given attention and are also prepared for use.

All barns for the cattle and livestock exhibits are in readiness for the many entries already received in those departments. Preparation for the many poultry entries are also being made.

Several horses arrive.

Several race horses were seen on the tracks today but few others are expected until the week of the fair. All barns possible will be made available for the exceptionally large number of horses expected to be entered in the races, which are to be held four days of the fair.

Entries in every department are being received daily by Secretary Roland Leeper. Beginning next week, Mr. Leeper expects to be "swamped" with entries in various departments.

Arrangements are being made for novel and interesting exhibits, and many new series will meet the eyes of the fair visitors the week of Sept. 14-15.

Harness race entries were expected in large numbers next week. Few entries to the regular races and trials have yet been received but at least 50 Derby Day entries have been recorded. All stake race entries were long ago received.

Managers of the fair are preparing for a busy season during the next two weeks.

G. W. Robertson, 77, Finds Suitable Substitute For Marble After Long Search

Discovers Formula Which He Claims Will Take Place of Quarried Stone in Construction Work Which Requires Bright Colorings; Product Labeled Marbleoid

After 17 years of a more or less ordinary life, G. W. Robertson, 77, of Marion, has just stepped into the limelight as the discoverer of a product of making an artificial stone, which he claims to be more substantial than marble.

The formula of the new stone, which has been developed by Robertson, is a mixture of two main ingredients, a synthetic resin and a mineral, both of which are used in the manufacture of the new stone. Several other synthetic resins are also included in the formula.

At the new stone, which Mr. Robertson has named "Marbleoid," is a synthetic resin, but many have been made of the new stone. Blocks of the Marbleoid from which floors, stairways, steps, and other things are being manufactured at the plant on S. High-st.

Mr. Robertson has spent a good many years of his life in the marble business, and he has been a member of the Marble Workers' Union of America for many years. He has been a member of the union since 1917, and he has been a member of the union since 1917.

SGT. J. C. PORTER STARTS ON SEVENTH ENLISTMENT

Returns to Post Here as Acting First Sergeant of Harding Guard

Sgt. John C. Porter, for 22 consecutive years a soldier in the United States Army, whose sixth enlistment expired July 22 of this year, has reenlisted and has been assigned to his old position as Acting First Sergeant at the Harding Tomb Guard Detachment in this city.

At the close of his last enlistment, Sergeant Porter planned to take a three-months furlough before starting another three-year enlistment. After a 20-day visit with his mother in Massachusetts, he returned to the Harding Tomb Guard Detachment at Columbus and joined for the seventh time, declaring the routine of ordinary life too monotonous.

Sergeant Porter is a native of Scotland and enlisted in the U. S. Army in 1912. He served with credit in the World War and took part in many important battles. During his army life he has been stationed in all parts of the United States, in Panama and the Philippines.

He has been stationed at the Harding Tomb since the death of the late President Warren G. Harding in 1923. His stay at the Tomb has been longer than any other soldier of the Tomb Infantry.

Upon the expiration of this term, Sergeant Porter plans to reenlist for the full 30 years for the United States. He will be entitled to pay, at the end of that time, a pension of the age limit set by the U. S. government.

Ancient Custom Decees Oysters Good in "R" Months

OYSTER season opens today.

You may eat as many oysters as you like without offending the ancient custom which decrees that oysters may be eaten only during a month with an "R" in it.

So today, the first of September, the sweet music of oysters sizzling to a golden brown in frying pans, recalls the ears of the oyster lover.

Oysters of many varieties will soon be placed on the market with the usual sign telling how safe, low nourishing, and how easily digested the oyster is.

There are claimed to be 370 named species of oysters of which considerable numbers are edible. In this section oysters are particularly good of the "Blue Point," an oyster of more than ordinary size.

Epurates, however, say that its flavor is not equal to that of some of the smaller varieties. So when buying oysters, most persons give no special technical name to their purchases, but simply ask for "some oysters."
